

A talk on Human Values at The ICFAI University, Sikkim in association with Department of Philosophy, University of North Bengal

Date : 11/03/2024

A talk on “Human Values,” was held at The ICFAI University, Sikkim, in collaboration with the Department of Philosophy, University of North Bengal, and The ICFAI University, Sikkim. Dr. Rohit Rathi, Registrar, and Mrs. Khina Maya Rimal, Dean Academic, facilitated the event, welcoming Prof. Jyotish Chandra Basak, Dr. Anureema Bhattachary (Associate Prof), and Dr. Mayank Bora (Assistant Prof) from the Department of Philosophy.

This insightful talk was a part of the Academic Field Trip Program, where students engaged in a dynamic discussion led by with Mr. Kishore Rai, (Assistant Professor, and Department of Humanities & Social Sciences) at our ICFAI University, Sikkim. The program proved highly interactive, discussing fundamental values, judgment, second chances, psychological impact, mistakes, and motivation on an individual level. Both faculties engaged in lively discussions, eliciting varied opinions from the students who were actively involved, raising questions throughout the event.

The talk also featured a panel discussion with four Ph.D. scholars. Topics covered included justice in society and its impact on human values and economic stability, discrimination based on religion, advocating judgment on the basis of good and bad debts rather than religion, and the importance of respecting humanity in the context of Artificial Intelligence.

Additionally, the scholars delved into government welfare schemes designed to uplift marginalized communities. The overall experience was deemed highly interactive, knowledgeable, and fruitful, providing a platform for diverse perspectives on human values.